

Abstract

A distributed provisioning system has a central directory server and a number of distributed provisioning servers. The provisioning servers connect to the central directory server for provisioning information, and for provisioning information for user access devices that need provisioning. The central directory server stores the provisioning information for the provisioning servers in uniquely accessible restricted access locations of a database, and maintains provisioning information for user access devices in a globally available location of the database.

100.249US01-48372560